SANTA FE INDEPENDENT 2009 FILM FESTIVAL

Santa Fe Independent Film Fest will show the most provocative independent films from all over the globe. Underground cinema, art films, innovative and experimental work, guerilla projects and politically controversial films are welcomed with open arms. We do not host lavish parties, stroke movie stars, or charge outrageous ticket prices. It is the belief of the Santa Fe IFF that art is for the people and going to the movies should cost $6 or less.

Our objective is to put film in New Mexico back into the hands of the community through a grass roots movement of filmmakers. By doing so we mean to create a model for the democratization of film all over the world.

This year's fest will showcase over twenty films, including eight features.

Along with the many up and coming filmmakers that will be shown at this year's fest, we will premier a teaser for Norman Patrick Brown's newest picture, The Rainbow Boy and we will also show the Canadian feature Heater starring Gary Farmer.

Check out our new website at santafeindependentfilmfestival.com for a schedule of films and up-to-date info. Below is a copy of the 2009 film schedule.
